Enabling Groups

Friends, I was truly grateful for the way in which you approached our conversation about 'Enabling Groups' at our March Church Meeting, and for the words of support and guidance offered since. I just want to say that I hear you loud and clear. We cannot, as a church, continue to work as we have done in previous years, expecting people to take on large and sometimes unmanageable roles, with responsibility for much of church life lying on the shoulders of a few. The lives we lead are simply too complex and fragmentary to support that model any more. Many of you are still working, or supporting families, or other charitable endeavours, or are juggling the barrage of hospital appointments that tend to accompany later life. You so desperately want to help support our church, and play an active role in its leadership and decision-making, but you can't do so in the way we're currently organised. Like I said, I hear you, and I'm so grateful for your engagement with this important subject.

What you seem to be saying is this: if we, as a church, can find a way of organising our work into manageable chunks, looked after by groups of people who support each other with that responsibility, then more people will feel able to commit to, and participate in, the work of the church. It represents an opportunity, too, for those who already commit huge amounts of their time and energy to church life, to think about what, in particular, they feel God is calling them to focus on in their ministry. So, the paper I am writing on 'Enabling Groups', to be presented at our June Church Meeting, will include the potential for a whole range of different groups. As well as the ones you'd expect: worship, mission, finance, property, and the like, there'll be some that you might not expect. How about a 'Music and Drama' enabling group, or an 'Art and Crafts' enabling group, or a 'Prayer' enabling group? The possibilities are endless and rely on people having enthusiasm for a particular area of church life, rather than constantly feeling badgered to be a square peg filling a round hole!

And I fully take on board the points made about making sure any new way of working is accountable and robust to the extent expected of a charity. The paper will include detail about how enabling groups will log their decisions and proposed actions, and how these will be overseen by a member of the leadership team. I want enabling groups to major on conversation and bringing God's vision for our church to life. The emphasis needs to be on giving people the freedom to act and, perhaps, to take risks, but not at the expense of the necessary checks and balances needed for us to run the organisation safely and prudently: admin 'lite', not admin 'free'!

So, I pray that you will join me on an enabling journey into our future. That between us, and with some creative thinking, we can truly bring the sum of all our parts to bear on God's work in our church. In Christ,

Tim

Editorial

'Pray for me ... that God may give me wisdom and strength to carry out the solemn promises I shall be making, and that I may faithfully serve Him and you, all the days of my life.'

That was the prayer request made by Queen Elizabeth II in her first Christmas broadcast in 1952.

In 2008 the Queen said: 'I hope that, like me, you will be comforted by the example of Jesus of Nazareth who, often in circumstances of great adversity, managed to live an outgoing, unselfish and sacrificial life ... He makes it clear that genuine human happiness and satisfaction lie more in giving than receiving; more in serving than in being served.'

This month we have more memories of the Coronation as we look forward to Platinum Jubilee celebrations next month, celebrating a Queen with a strong Christian faith. We are grateful to Hilary Holt this month for our front cover photo of Nottingham lace which she refers to on page 8.

'Brief Encounter' and 'Where are They Now' make a return and we share contributions from our creative church community to inspire us.

We have a review of a play, evocative memories of a lockdown walk in the Itchen Valley, news from Julia (sic) Wills, Comedy Corner, news of events and more!

Many thanks to all our contributors.

News of the United Church Family

We were shocked and saddened to hear of the sudden death of John Axford on 23 March. We will particularly miss his welcoming presence on duty at the door on a Sunday morning, in the Coffee Bar in the week as a regular customer and his great sense of fun! As a committed member of our membership, John worked tirelessly but quietly in the background in our church life – living out his strong Christian faith. We shall miss him but we do give thanks for all he achieved. We send our love and sympathy to Margaret and all their family.

We also send our sympathy to Chris and Penny Roles and their family after the death of Chris's father, Bill, on 27 March. Bill was a member of St James Road Methodist Church in Southampton and will be much missed.

Thanks to all those Pastoral Visitors who have responded to the Pastoral Review questionnaire. The results are now being analysed and the start of a new framework will be put in place.

A new edition of the Fellowship List will be available shortly.

My Miniature World

Some of my 1/12th scale houses are inspired by places that Ralph and I have visited. The Tilehouse pub and restaurant, my current project, was inspired by a visit to Porto. That is one to share in the future.

In September 2001, a week after 9/11, having consulted our family, Ralph and I boarded a flight from Heathrow to Boston. We joined a much depleted group of American tourists to do a 'New England in the Fall' tour. Internal flights in the USA were still suspended but international flights had started on the day that we were booked to travel. Security was second to none, as you can imagine. It was a wonderful holiday made extra special by the welcome that we received from the Americans who had made it to Boston. They could not believe that we would consider leaving the safety of the UK to be with them. It was the beautiful New England lighthouses that inspired my miniature lighthouse. It is constructed from on an American kit which is modelled on the lighthouse on Pumpkin Island off the east coast of Maine. As with my other houses it has a story.

Pumpkin Island Light

In 2016 Martha and Gerald moved into this decommissioned lighthouse on Pumpkin Island as their retirement home. It needed extensive renovations but is now just perfect. The view over the water to the town of Stonington just a boat trip away is stunning. It is so peaceful on the island and the dogs love it.

Martha has her own craft room to occupy her. Gerald is hopeful that he can watch his favourite TV programmes in peace. The flashing beacon still works and is so useful to guide their friends to the island. It's much more reliable than Satnav.

Some of you will have visited us when we held open mornings in aid of the church projects. This has not been possible for a while now but we hope to welcome people again in the future. Meanwhile if you would like to see my houses give me a call.

A Treasured Coronation Memento (Front Cover)

I was at primary school in Nottingham in June 1953, and still have the beautiful Nottingham lace handkerchief that was presented to the schoolgirls in commemoration of the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth II

Incorporated in the design is the year 1953 on each corner, underneath two crowns and the letters ER, each surrounded by a garland of roses.

After all these years, I wonder how many of these fragile mementos have survived and are still treasured?

An Unforgettable Glimpse

I was first year at University but in the holidays I was at home in Blackburn and my friend was still a sixth former at a boarding school in Rutland. He said he would send the chauffeur in his birthday present, a new car, and we would collect him from school. I didn't believe him. We didn't even have a car at all. But sure enough that is what happened. Also his family had a flat in Park Lane and we would go down for the Coronation.

In fact, we watched the service itself on television and then went out to drink up the atmosphere. There was my very briefest of encounters. One of the Queen's attendants on foot and in her beautiful gown was hurrying towards us in the side street looking rather distracted. I didn't even notice which one she was because her dress was so beautiful and it has remained unforgettable for all these years.

First Love

The moss was growing on the tree
The sky birthing the early star
And then my lady turned to me
And said, 'Dear boy now can't you see
How beautiful you are.'

The moon was glowing in the night
The fields juicing up their dew
As underneath reflected light
I said, 'My love there is no sight
As beautiful as you.'

Letter From Highcliffe

Hi to all of you at The United Church! I can't believe that it's six months since I moved from Winchester to Highcliffe. I feel like I have been here forever! It is so wonderful to be able to walk down to the sea every day, no matter what the weather. The view constantly changes, sometimes the Isle of Wight has disappeared completely and sometimes, like in the photo, it shines brightly!

Everyone in Highcliffe seems to be very welcoming. I think it's because we are all retired and have time on our hands! I feel like I've made lots of new friends already. I've joined a 'walking for health' group on a Monday morning and there are usually around 30 of us that stride out for an hour or so and then treat ourselves to a cup of coffee at the Cliffhanger café.

People in the retirement flats where I live are really nice and we have a variety events planned every month which just keeps us in touch with one another. I am enjoying living in a sort of community – we have a communal laundry which is a great gathering place!

I tried a number of different churches when I first came down here, but eventually decided to join Highcliffe Methodist Church. When I first went there I realised just how important it is to exercise a welcoming ministry and they certainly do it in spades! It's a smaller congregation than The United Church and I wouldn't say I know everyone yet, but I'm getting there!

The Isle of Wight in one direction

Last Sunday I was particularly touched by the beaming smile and very warm 'Hello Julia' which I received from an older lady I'd been chatting with over coffee the previous week (yes, I've decided I'm old enough to be 'Julia' down here!)

Like many churches our congregation is on the 'more mature' side but there is definitely a very enthusiastic core of people who take part in leading worship, and they do it very well. There's often laughter and I always feel that I have worshipped when I leave. We even have a small singing group and occasionally a drummer (I think he is about 74 years old!) However, I would be lying if I said the music was particularly good! But one thing is for sure our AV screens are excellent – I can see all the words to the songs!

I've been keeping a bit of a low profile so far, but Phil, our minister has now asked me if I would like to become a member, which means I shall be transferring my membership sometime in the near future. I suspect that will also mean I'll start offering to do stuff, but I've enjoyed the anonymity of the past few months.

So this is, I suppose, my farewell to Winchester United church. I so much enjoyed being a member with you all over the past twenty odd years and really hope God will continue to bless the ministry that you all share. Thank you for being my friends and please do come and visit if you fancy some sea air!

Where are They Now? Beth Cornish (Coleman)

These days you can find me in North County San Diego, California!

I left Winchester for the University of Birmingham in 2001 where I met my husband James. We spent a summer travelling around Brazil, which gave me the travel bug, leading to me spending four months travelling through SE Asia, Australia and America after gaining my degree. I went on to work in Marketing and gain my post-grad Marketing qualifications while James completed his PhD in Sport & Material Sciences with a focus on golf. I worked as the Marketing Co-ordinator for The Fire Fighters Charity, and then as Marketing Manager at QMC – both in Basingstoke, while living in Hartley Wintney, where we bought our first home.

James worked for the MOD in London, and even spent four months in Afghanistan, before landing a job with TaylorMade Golf... in California! We went without hesitation, thinking it would be for just a few years, but nine years later we are still here!

We had our daughter Jessica in 2012 so she was only 4 months old when we moved. With a very restricted visa I was unable to work so stayed home with her, and went on to have our second daughter Lottie in 2015. We finally got our Green Cards in 2017, which allowed me to turn my hobby of baking into a business. I set up 'Baked by Beth' in 2018 which I run from home, and allows me to work part time while being around for our girls. (Check out my work at Facebook.com/bakedbyBethCornish).

So I now spend my time baking a lot. I'm the Communications Rep on our school PTO and volunteer in school, I help lead Jessica's Girl Scout Troop, run around taking the girls to their activities and I love to run and work out!

Jessica is now 9 (3rd grade) and Lottie is 6 (1st grade) so this is my first year having both girls in school full time! But we also have a cat and dog so they're keeping me company!

We love California life and are very fortunate – we enjoy lots of beach days, pool time, blue skies and have amazing friends here. We miss having family nearby but are thankful that we can travel home every year (usually!) and both our parents come out regularly, and our siblings when they can.

The United Church will always be a special place for us as we were married there and both our girls were baptised there. From my Junior Church days I fondly remember our weekend trip to France and a youth hostelling/walking weekend in Swanage, as well as charity bake sales, bring-and-buy-sales, doing the 'Grain of Mustard seed' show, carol singing around Winchester, weekends in Swanage and races around the ramp!

I am grateful for the values, beliefs and sense of community that being a member of The United Church gave me while I was young which I have taken with me through my life and hope to instil in our children. On the occasions we have been in Winchester my girls have been to the church with their grandparents (Ann & Richard) to join in with Messy Church, help with the Live at Home scheme lunches, the make-it-up Nativity and this last Christmas we did some ad hoc carol singing with Howard and Rosie Mellor which we all enjoyed!

Thanks!

Beth Cornish

The View to the East

Late March, and with the fine somewhat warm weather for the time of year I embark upon my exercise regime of hill walking clad in summer attire for the first time since October of last year. Carrying the body mass index that I do, for most of the year when on exercise, e.g. embarking on an accumulated ascent of 800–950ft with any ambient temperature of 13° C or more, the imperative is to keep cool rather than ‘keeping warm’; in fact, even on the ‘reduced’ local walk of 15 to 20 minutes at pace around the flat Itchen Valley such heat is produced that on return to home sedentary work, such as writing this article, can take place in a cool room with no need for additional heat for some time.

When it comes to ‘temperature comfort’ other factors have a contributory input. In addition to physical activity, such things as humidity, the strength of the wind and one’s exposure to that wind is cardinal; this itself will be dependent on direction in relation to the side of the hill you are ascending/descending together with tree and shrub cover, etc. All of these inputs give what is known as the ‘real feel’ temperature.

On reaching the summit of the hill on the day in question, the full force of the east wind which was blowing could be felt, together with its cooling effect. To the south, the summit of St Boniface Down, IoW, can be seen, and for many attracts the eye south; yet, with that east wind, my mind was drawn eastward, across to the West Sussex Weald, and also, of course, much further east; the war in Ukraine had not been long in being. A prayer. Then with the Sussex High Weald in mind, Crowborough* to be precise, some of the last words of Sherlock Holmes, chronologically speaking, come to mind:

“I think not, Holmes. It is very warm.”

“Good old Watson! You are the one fixed point in a changing age. There’s an east wind coming all the same, such a wind as never blew on England yet. It will be cold and bitter, Watson, and a good many of us may wither before its blast. But it’s *Crowborough was the home town of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

God's own wind none the less, and a cleaner, better, stronger land will lie in the sunshine when the storm has cleared. Start her up, Watson, for it's time that we were on our way."

Quotation from His Last Bow by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

The story is set in 1914 immediately before the outbreak of WW1 and was written in 1917. I do not have the space or think it appropriate to attempt to unpick the sentiments characterised in the quotation above except to express that, to my mind, it does convey some of the questions and paradoxes that war seems to generate: e.g. how can God 'allow this to happen'? That there will be a better world (or at least country) after the conflict. 'A Land Fit for Heroes', etc.

Perhaps another aspect of this quotation which may surprise readers is the notion of Sherlock Holmes being in the 20th century at all, so ensconced in the late Victorian period is the character in the minds of many, reinforced, no doubt by such TV series as The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, the opening credits portraying the very epitome of late Victorian England – not a motorised vehicle in sight, people dressed in Victorian clothing and the 'stills' yellowing as if Victorian pictures.

People born into my generation, seemingly known as 'baby-boomers' and younger age groups, hitherto, have not had the worry of war in Europe.

While I stood on that hill looking east, I felt something at one with my grandparents; born into that late Victorian era, they saw two world wars. On the face of it, currently, ours is not the measure of threat that they faced; yet potentially, we face a threat of a different order.

The degree to which 'the winds of change' which Harold Macmillan referred to (in a very different context) are the outturn of the will of God v the free will of humans, I will leave for others more qualified than myself to deliver an exegesis on; for me, coming back down the hill, together with physically cooling on the descent, I found myself giving thanks for loved ones, friends and fellowship at The United Church.

The view to the east: Summer 2019 – the last summer before the pandemic, thus an affinity with 1939.

The way ahead may be narrow, steep and without immediate guidance; surely an experience familiar to individuals, churches, nations and the world.

Chris Young

Link to Hope

Ukraine is in everyone's thoughts at this terrible time. The suffering is unimaginable.

One of the Project Manager's houses has been destroyed by shelling. At that moment his family and a big part of the Church had escaped.

This is the reality of life in Ukraine now.

The Family and Elderly Shoebox appeal is ready to go. Your shoeboxes will be needed more than ever. There are so many more people this year that need them. We ask that everyone in the Church will fill a box this year. Leaflets should arrive soon.

We hope to have coffee mornings and tea afternoons to help fill more boxes. Knitters and sewers have been hard at work and are making good progress. Drawstring bags will also be much appreciated as these can be used for storage. Please let us have spare mugs and head scarves and reading glasses which we were short of last year. We have been collecting since January and now need to begin to fill boxes. Donations are always needed but we would really appreciate more boxes being made up by you. Please also ask friends and family to collect items too.

These people have lost EVERYTHING and will have to start again. We really hope everyone will get involved this year.

Many thanks.

Jesus My Boy* by John Dowie and acted by John Lofthouse

A comedy about fathers everywhere

Have you ever given a thought to Joseph and wondered how he felt when Mary told him the news of her miraculous pregnancy? This production put us in the picture with a hilarious yet touching performance by John Lofthouse.

John is a leading Opera Singer and his professionalism made his monologue utterly believable. Jesus My Boy, written by John Dowie, is described as 'A comedy about fathers everywhere' and indeed is studded with clever one-liners, but the universal experience of learning to be a parent is a bewildering one for this humble carpenter. It is Mary who issues the orders. Their conversations ring a bell with any couple today. Joseph's view of the men he regards as rather 'unwise' is enough to make his audience laugh out loud, and I did. Though the final act of his son's life is the dramatic conclusion, it is treated with such straightforwardness and from the father's outraged perspective. It is Joseph's heartfelt sorrow we are left with.

HM Collective are a Hampshire based production company and aim to present performances with high production values at a minimal cost so that as many people as possible can benefit from the joy of live performance.

Having studied Theology and taught Religious Studies before he trained to become an Opera Singer, John Lofthouse's performance had an undeniable spiritual aspect, which was inspiring. The script was beautifully written and I imagine a dream to act but it did not seem like watching a play so much as sharing a life.

I hope we have the opportunity of seeing more performances like this one.

A Poetic Tribute to Jonathan Watkins

Yellow Car, Beep Beep

Yellow car, beep beep
Uncle Jonny's coming down the street.

Christmas Day or Easter lunch,
He's never one to miss our bunch.

Rachael, Emily, Gio, Tom,
He never gets your birthday wrong.

Full of questions, inquisitive,
Eager to travel to my gigs.

No matter how much or little you share,
He'll always make sure to say a prayer.

Toy cars – with Paul and Jane,
Three cousins playing childhood games.

Rupert and Basil, Annette and Doreen,
You'll always find him in between.

Weekly calls with Auntie Annette,
They're off to France – they're in a jet.

They share a croissant; ham and cheese,
They always were easy to please.

They stick together, side by side,
Peas in a pod, arms open wide.

Yellow car, beep beep
We'll miss you coming down the street.

Daisy Norburn

This poem about family was written as a tribute to Jonathan Watkins by his god-daughter and read at his funeral.

Rupert, Doreen, Basil and Annette were Jonathan's parents and aunt and uncle. Annette was the last survivor of that generation and grandmother to the author and the other children mentioned. She and Jonathan spent many holidays together.

Epitaph

The following note was found among the possessions of my late mother, Lilian Giles, and in her own handwriting:

'Epitaph

This prophetic poem, translated by Dag Hammarskjöld [an early Secretary General of the United Nations] as a schoolboy, was found in the family Bible after his death:

The day you were born everybody was happy – you cried alone.

Make your life such that, in your last hour all others are weeping,

And you are the only one without a tear to shed!

Then you shall calmly face death, whenever it comes.

Dagens Nyheter'

Editor's note:

The author of the poem quoted by Ian's mother was Ralph Edo Emerson.

Dagens Nyheter is a Swedish daily newspaper.

Dag Hammarskjöld

Brief Encounter with the Giffin Family

What is the first news/historical event you can recall from your early life?

Trevor: I remember the first landing on the moon in 1969 and the Apollo space programme. Both were huge news events at the time and I recall the excitement and thrill of watching the lunar module taking off from the Moon, realising that if the technology failed, then the astronaut could be left stranded!

One bit of advice you'd give to your younger self?

Lorraine: Have confidence and believe in yourself. I still need to remind myself of this even now.

What is your favourite saying or quotation?

Lorraine: Psalm 139, 13–16

'For you created my innermost being. You knit me together in my mother's womb.

I praise you because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; your works are wonderful, I know full well.

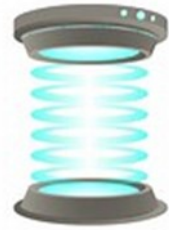

My frame was not hidden from you when I was made in the secret place, when I was woven together in the depths of the earth.

Your eyes saw my unformed body; all the days ordained for me were written in your book, before one of them came to be.'

I have chosen these psalm verses because I feel emotional at the thought that God knew me before I was born and he knows what is ahead of me. That makes me feel secure in his love.

What do you wish you had invented?

Michael: I wish I could invent teleports. They would mean I could go wherever I wanted at the click of a button. I would transport myself to the Maldives, Rio and Alaska. I could also click back to get my wallet!

If you could spend a day in one city or place at one moment in history, where and when would that be?

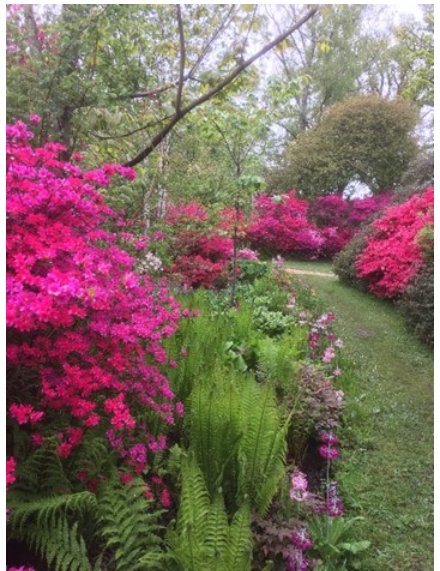

Michael: VE Day 1945. I think the atmosphere in London that day would have been amazing; to see the emotions of people who had come through the War. I would liked to have seen Winston Churchill on the balcony of Buckingham Palace.

What would people be surprised to know about you?

Lorraine: I've been in prison many times. I should elaborate ...previously I worked as a Probation Officer, visiting different prisons to interview offenders whilst they served a sentence or in order to write a court report. I also spent 3 months working at New Hall women's prison near Wakefield.

Where do you feel closest to God?

Katie: Furzey Gardens in the New Forest. I feel so calm and happy there and have visited many times throughout my life. There is evidence of God's beautiful creation all around.

Ministers in the Winchester, Eastleigh and Romsey Methodist Circuit

Many of you will know that we were seeking two ministers from stationing this year, but were only matched with one, the new Superintendent who will join us from September 2022. Since then we have been waiting for permission to make another plan for the appointment not filled at Chandler's Ford and Colden Common with Twyford. I am pleased that we can now let you know that, subject to the Stationing Action Committee agreeing this on 25 April, the plan from September 2022 is as follows:

Revd Ruth Fry will become the minister of Chandler's Ford and Colden Common with Twyford until August 2025 when her current invitation ends. The division of her time will be approximately 75% Chandler's Ford and 25% Colden Common with Twyford. A Local Pastor will be sought to become a member of the CFMC pastoral team. The focus of their work is yet to be agreed.

Revd Kate Cambridge has agreed to increase her hours to 75%. She will be the minister of St Andrew's (50%) and Bishopstoke (25%). Her appointment will be for 5 years.

We are telling you about these plans now because we did not wish there to be continuing uncertainty given how much there has been over the past few years. We are as confident as we can be that the Stationing Action Committee will accept our plans but ask you to pray for the work taking place behind the scenes, and for Ruth, Kate and the churches at this time of transition.

The consequence of this plan is that we will be seeking one minister in the 2022–3 stationing process – for Romsey and the Southern Area Team.

If you have any questions about this please contact the Circuit Steward appointed to your church. Your minister will know who that is.
